LET THERE BE Light

Graceanne Svendsen, aesthetician and certified laser technician, recommends treatment with the Fraxel laser (fraxel.com) to correct pretty much everything under the sun: fine lines, wrinkles, UV damage, large pores and acne scars on the face, neck, chest and hands. “Fraxel goes by the names fractional or subablative fractional laser and harnesses tiny micro thermal zones to heat skin,” explains Svendsen. After treatment, your body sends growth factors to the areas for speedy recovery, and thus creates fresh collagen. Comedian Chelsea Handler recently took to Instagram to highlight the transformative results of her ProFractional laser treatment (sciton.com).

SMART Pricks

Hot off the press: an FDA-approved injectable filler called Volbella (juvederm.com) is now available nationwide. Dr. David Shafer, an NYC-based celeb plastic surgeon (shaferplasticsurgery.com), praises Volbella for its ability to lift the middle of the face, a region historically difficult to treat. "The formula is thinner and softer than its predecessors, so it's great for the fine lines around the mouth and lips," says Shafer. The technology behind it prevents swelling and elongates wear (it's been found to last for up to a year), providing the best bang for your buck. "Patients are receiving a natural and hydrated appearance without looking 'done,'" explains Shafer.
